

Summary

Science journalists are a vital link in the process of communicating science to the public, and yet their personal opinions are rarely taken into account. This paper documents a small-scale attempt to rectify this situation, by asking journalists to complete questionnaires designed to provide an insight into their working practices.

Download this article
- PDF (148 KB)

Back to the Table of Contents

Publishers

Sponsors

Collaboration

Join the network

Email

Subscribe